BINDING Paperback, top cover with an opaque satin finish

Fifty-six snapshots showing south Italy's unique heart, combining both tragedy and comedy in an effective and suggestive manner and focusing on the so-called 'Questione meridionale' (the problem with the south). While producing a strong emotional impact, the images capture a unique place, a unique reality, the variety of the southern lands of Italy.

A MOVING TESTIMONY OF THE CONTEMPORARY SITUATION
OF THE SOUTH OF ITALY

Emiliano Mancuso was born in Rome in 1971. He approached photography relatively late in his adulthood, in a quest to portray reality as well as to tell stories. He joined the Agenzia Grazia Neri and his photos were published by prestigious Italian and foreign Magazines: The New York Times, Stern, Newsweek, National Geographic Italia, L'Espresso and many more. In 2006, he took part in the photo book 'Made in Italy', a reportage featuring Italy's economic crisis at the beginning of the millennium, published by the British publishing house Trolley Ltd.
